Authorhouse. Paperback. Condition: New. 120 pages. Dimensions: 11.0in. x 8.5in. x 0.3in. A time that I was going through life altering experiences; on a visit with the well known writer/film-maker Barbara Probst Solomon, she suggested I write about my father and his WW II experiences as a POW in a Russian Concentration camp. I had already started such a biographical idea and I needed something more immediate so I chose this work of poetry with original art as a soul searching venture. A Walk In Time became a project I chose to learn Photoshop to gain a better understanding of the digital age that shattered old ways of animation film-making. This idea was inspired during an Aesthetic Realism lesson when this question was posed. How can you as an artist/film-maker use today's technology as a means of self expression? The book is a poetic account depicting some of my childhood years in Italy, mixed in with poetry about love relationships while growing up on Long Island and present time as a single father to a teenage daughter who experienced her mother's tragic death to cancer. The book uses original poetry to tell stories that are illustrated by me with Etchings, original drawings, photographs and celestial paintings that were enhanced with Photoshop. With my love for pasta I include a personal recipe for making spaghetti with broccoli rabe, using Ronzoni Perciatelli 6 spaghetti. But I also share a love for the Old American West and often wonder how things might have been different for the American Indians had Italian chefs conquered the west instead of the U. S. Cavalry. Therefore I include a fable about an Italian chef; Chef Luiggi, who time travels to feed the Indians, spaghetti and meat balls. Included is also a poem written and illustrated by my daughter...
