Only the present is real and even that might be an illusion. For as long as anyone could remember, the Fundamental Laws of Time gave structure and meaning to the Universe. That is until the fractal based encryption key designed to eliminate software piracy, called the Core Program, present in all Trinary Code software, was transformed into the Daemon Virus. A deadly mirror copy of the original key it had shut down all advanced technology across the known Universe. Without this key, all advanced software had ceased to function, sending mankind back into the dark ages of the 20th, to a time before interstellar space travel. Which came first? Did the Space-Time Rift, caused by a failed time shift experiment, corrupt the software or did the corrupted software cause the Space-Time Rift? It seems that one surely could not happen without the other! This paradox has put the four fundamental laws of Present Time under threat. It was now down to a small select group of space explorers to find a virgin copy of the Core Program. A race across space and time before the effects of the Rift caught up with them and destroyed all remaining uncorrupted copies. This is not just a race against an ever expanding Space-Time anomaly, but also a race to preserve a love affair against all the odds. Our hero Aaron, joined by the young beautiful Maarah, and an android called Sub, form an unlikely trio in this battle to find an uncorrupted copy and return it back to civilisation . Who will win? You can find out what happens when you read the first exciting novel, called Considerations in Time, part of the Time...
