Excerpt from The Delinquent: Or Seeing Company, a Comedy in Five Acts Sir Edw. Alone! why, what are you? Nich. Me! pooh! I m nothing! Sir Edw. No! but nothing as you are, I fancy there never was a female hermitage without something like you - But, don t be alarm d - I visit the old lady for the sake of a young one, the lovely Mills Olivia. Nich. Miss Olivia! Sir Edw. Ay: I met her last night at a friends house, and hearing (lie was the adopted child of your mistress, Miss Stoic s brother - Nich She is; - of the gallant Major Tornado, who, blessings on him, arrived here two days ago. Sir Edw. Major Tornado! tell me - was he lately at Naples? Nich. I can t say: but its not unlikely, for he came over land from India. Sir Edw. From India! tis the same - I met him there, on my travels, three months ago; and a more active, animated - But a hermitage I Major Tornado two whole days in a hermitage! with no companion but this Petrarch in petticoats - Zounds! is he alive? Nich. Hardly! the quiet of a country life is almost death to him; and whilst his lifter is constantly praising the charms of retirement, he is secretly cursing them. But here he comes, to describe, in person, his dislike to rural felicity. [Exit into the House. Enter Major Tornado. Sir Edw. Major Tornado! I rejoice to fee you. Major.
