The word mustard in itself brings on an idea of a pungent and delicious condiment, without which you may not enjoy your hamburgers, meat steaks, and other preparations. We just need that extra touch of mustard to add to the flavor of an otherwise bland dish. The old Romans knew all about it when they prepared a mixture of young wine - mustum-and mustard seeds and ground them together into a paste. The ard portion of the word comes from the Latin word for hot and flaming -ardens, as in ardent.
