Excerpt from Radium, Vol. 5: September, 1915 Not only does the degree Of change vary, but also the latent period Of change. This is dependent both on the character of the radiation and the character of the tissue treated. For example, if sufficient radiation with soft beta rays is given to produce erythema Of the skin, this condition will appear in a week on the average. If such an erythema is produced by hard gamma rays it may not appear until the fourth week after the radiation, or even later. Taking another example to show the difference in tissues, a radiation with gamma rays may cause the disappearance within 48 hours Of a large lymphosarcoma. Equal radiation given to a carcinoma Of the cervix may produce no visible change what ever in five or six days, but nevertheless leads to the entire disappearance within five or six weeks. It is evident that the histological changes will vary greatly with the tissues treated. Taking the cervix carcinoma as an example one finds in three or four days a tendency for the nuclei Of the cells to swell and the protoplasm to become vacuolated; at the end Of two weeks many of the cells are disintegrating; at the end Of four weeks all carcinoma cells may have disappeared and in their place a new connective tissue formed; at the end of several months there is a great deal Of connective tissue and a marked diminution in the vascularity of the part. Nerve and brain tissue are fortunately very resistant. Any injury to these tissues from radiation would seem to be due to changes in the blood-vessels supplying them. SO much for a hasty...
