The former company was established in 1879 and the latter in 1881. The system is composed of the following lines of communication, viz.: Via Colon From New York, there are two direct duplexed cables to Colon, touching at Guantanamo, Cuba. These cables continue across the Isthmus of Panama by means of duplicate underground cables uniting with cables at Panama, extending down the west coast as far as Valparaiso and serving the Republics of Colombia, Venezuela, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile. From Valparaiso, Chile, the lines (triplicate) extend to Santiago, and, also, across the Andes to the city of Buenos Aires, in the Argentine. An All America cable is now being installed between Buenos Aires, Argentina, and Montevideo, Uruguay, and it is expected will be in operation within a short time.
