Excerpt: . alternation of direct and indirect narration, accusative with infinitive, and ablative absolute, and its finely-graded sequence of tenses, and the heavy and monotonous classical Sanskrit sentence overloaded with participles and gerunds, often to the almost complete exclusion of the finite verb, and its long compounds which usurp the functions of inflection. Greek, again, uses its inflections in a very different way from Latin, and more like the modern analytical languages of Europe. From this point of view the morphological classification of languages acts as a welcome corrective to the purely genealogical and historical classification. It teaches us both to recognize what are the really characteristic and more or less permanent features in the different periods of a language or in the members of a group of cognate languages, and also to realize that languages genealogically unconnected may develop similar morphological structure. But even...
