Excerpt from Acta Victoriana, Vol. 36: February, 1912 And when the evening mist clothes the riverside with poetry as with a veil, and the poor buildings lose themselves in the dim sky, and the tall chimney s become campanili, and the ware houses are palaces in the night, then the wayfarer hastens home; the working man and the cultured one, the wise man and the one of pleasure cease to understand as they have ceased to see, and Nature, who for once has sung in tune, sings her exquisite song to the artist alone, her son and her master - her son in that he loves her, her master in that he knows her. To him her secrets are unfolded; to him her lessons have become gradually clear. He looks at her tower, not with the enlarging lens that he may gather facts for the botanist, but with the light of the one who sees in her choice selection of brilliant tones and. Delicate tints suggestions of future harmonies. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
