I have already asked, perhaps, if you wish for Biirghers poems. The ballad of Lenor has undergone three different translations: the last of which, by the honorable Mr. Spencer, is a most pompous folio, with several beautiful engravings, and the German text on the opposite page: --price one guinea. The laureats production is eighteen pence. Have you yet seen the new Parochial history of Stockton---in which, by the by, you have got a snug niche; though, I doubt, whether you will think yourself much indebted for it either to the author or to his informant. . . Health and friendship! J. Rx-rson. CLIV. To THE EnrrroR. If you can find no better employment for the old womans two guineas than the foolish device and pitiful conceit you have so elaborately described, you would do well, I think, to return them; since I cannot easily imagine that there is so very an old woman in the world that would make you a present of two guineas if she thought you had no more occasion for them than to play the fool with. as for my part, I assure you I will have no sort of concern in the business. If you must have a coat of arms, you had best apply to the heralds oflice at once, and be made a gentleman according to law. Your crest, if I might advise, should be a fools cap, in commemoration of...
