Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from What Constitutes a Finished Education: Delivered on Commencement Day at Mills College, Cal., May 27, 1896 Or, in science what awaits us? Not only must we master the old laws and principles which our fathers knew, but on whirling, steam-driven wheels, and along the line of winged wires, must we try, to keep abreast of the latest in Roentgen's rays or Tesla's lights, the new surgery and pathology, telescopic and microscopic achievements of each fleeting hour. If knowledge of facts were an essential education, the scientist must be ever in pursuit of the newest, lest he become a fossil, foraging over ancient and forgotten fields. For we tread to-day the highway of discovery, and we tread it fast. Edison and his compeers keep us out of breath in the chase, and make earnest haste themselves; for life is short, and the far fringe only of the fertile forest is yet explored. Secrets of matter and of mind, and the universe of heavenly being, lie all about us, and only just now have we lifted a lower corner of the enshrouding veil. We cannot even inventory the facts and phenomena of the universe we can only sample them, and much that we learn we soon forget. How, then, is education possible? It is possible, since education lies not in the secure possession of facts, but in that quality of mind which can comprehend, classify and compare events and principles as they develop. Disciplined mind is educated mind, though multitudes of facts taught in the college curriculum may have been forgotten or never mastered. Education is mental quality. The educated mind sees a bone bleaching on the prairie,...
