Createspace, United States, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 203 x 133 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book is a memoir treating the family trait of moral vigor against a backdrop of paradigm shifts in American social history, a lighthearted read for the most part. It is a book whose time has come, in that I want to bring forward kindness and restraint, seemingly left aside for a time as our culture delves into new and old acts of discord and violence and moves away from humility and civility. As a teacher, I sense the time is right for a tribute to my late mother and my own life of sixty years. I hope to contribute wisdom for youth and put attention on the noteworthy year of 1948, my birth year. You will chuckle at a memory from my grandmother Beulah s small house in Hillsboro, in south-central Texas. You will feel tenderly toward Zelma my mother, Beulah s last child of seven, who was gifted in genuine attentiveness, and beautiful. I am the third generation, Patricia the author, and my chapters reveal academic orientation, the feel of retro American culture, and a couple of disappointments, mainly in endeavoring to work as a public-school teacher in Memphis, Tennessee. Ann, my daughter, is the fourth-generation woman, and she has quadrupled, in a word, our maternal side s professional outreach. Ann s life fills me with reverence for life s potentialities, and curiously, the British kind of personal strength my grandmother exhibited also gives me pause. Beulah s birth in 1884 and Ann s reaching age thirty in 2010 encompasses one-hundred-sixteen years, 42,224 days. I like this number: Read it forwards or backwards! Read this memoir and get a glimpse of my mother s six colorful...
