Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Ralph Waldo Emerson: A Discourse in West Church He hated bluster and ?ourish, was never a noisy man, but bashful in meeting personages. I invited him to dine with me, and he promised to come. I said, I am the more glad, because you will meet Father Taylor. Then he hesitated, and said, Father Taylor is a cannon, better on the common than in a parlor. But he was persuaded and recompensed for, as Einerson left, I said, That is a sweet spirit. Yes, replied Taylor, should he go to hell, it would change the climate, and the emigration would be that way. He, Taylor, had said before, I have laid my ear close to his heart, and never heard any jar in the machinery: he is more like Jesus than anybody else I have known. He was an evangelist, if that means to welcome and greet with good news, open as the day. When I first saw him as his guest, I think in 1835, he pointed to his manuscripts and said, They are for all who will look. I complained once that he had been overcharged at a watering-place, and he said it was all right, the rocks and the sea had been thrown into the bill. James T. Fields told me that on republishing one of his pieces he paid him again, and Em erson said, If I were an honest man, I should not take this money; but i was a thief from before the foundation of the world. Whither is the patent telescope, he swept this lower firma ment with, directed now? Such my question as I saw him in that sleep which needs no doctor...
