But then, on the other hand, it must be remembered also that in the States grade crossings, stretches of single line, absence of proper As to this speed for single miles I shall have something to say in the next chapter. Meanwhile, I would ask my readers not to attach too much importance to the statements in the text. signalling arrangements, and so forth, compel many slacks and halts of which we in England know nothing. Let us see how the two trains compare when this is deducted. The Midland spends 44 minutes in six intermediate stops. What the West Shore special did is, however, not quite so clear. As given at the time by the leading American railway paper, there were 20 stops (including 6 crossings and 5 detentions by trains or block signals) amounting in all to 1 hr. 34 min. On August 10th, 1888, the same paper published a different account, in which only 12 stops of 64 minutes in all were put down. The running speed on the former estimate was 54 miles an hour, on the latter it fell to 51. Professor Hadley writes as follows: The account in the Railroad Gazette of August 10th cannot be accepted without reserve. The writer has only deducted for station stops, while in fact there were several extra stops at intermediate points for grade crossings, and c. , which did not appear in the train sheet. . . I have some doubt...
