The Juvenile Instructor, Vol. 35: July 15, 1900 (Classic Reprint) (Paperback)

By George Quayle Cannon

Forgotten Books, United States, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Juvenile Instructor, Vol. 35: July 15, 1900 The number of men necessary to handle the raft depends more on the character of the currents to be traversed than on the size of the boat itself; but whether they are few or many, they make up their minds to a pretty long journey, with plenty of work and not a few dangers. When the river channel is straight and broad, and the raft moves along correctly, of course the men have an easy time. But when the stream is winding or narrow, or when rocks or rapids have to be encountered, it is by no means a restful or an idle time that the raftsmen have. Then, on most rivers that are navigable for other craft, it is required that timber rafts be hauled out to one side at night and made fast to await the daylight again. This means much poling and snubbing twice a day, and this, with many a wetting, occurs in the early or late hours of the day when the air is chill -...

Reviews

Complete guideline! Its this type of great read through. it absolutely was writtern quite perfectly and helpful. I am very happy to explain how this is basically the best book i actually have read through during my personal life and can be he very best book for at any time.
