THE ARCHIVES OF INTERNAL MEDICINE, VOL. 17: MARCH 15, 1916 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Archives of Internal Medicine, Vol. 17: March 15, 1916 A rapid glance at the brains in the five cases of primary ventricular hemorrhage shows displacement of the brain tissue to the side opposite the blood in three cases, and consequently the possibility of the comatose state as due to sudden undue pressure on the normal side of the brain appeared to be highly plausible. Such a finding in one case suggested the idea of surgical intervention in other cases with the object of relieving the intracranial pressure on the sound side. Accordingly an attempt was made in one case for a decompressive operation. Although the patient (a woman of 45) did not recover eventually, nevertheless the duration of her life was prolonged to twenty-four days. Immediately after the operation there was a decided improvement in her respiration, in response to external stimulation, in the cardiac action. For several days she could open her. Eyes voluntarily and when called by her name; she could be fed more readily than before, as she would respond to requests to open her mouth, and she could swallow. On the twentieth day the coma returned and on the twenty - fourth day she expired. The improvement obtained was undoubtedly due to the relief of the intracranial pressure. Unfortunately the operation was consented to only on the fifth day after the apoplectic seizure, viz., after five days of a comatose state. Efforts were made to operate in the other four cases, but permission could not be obtained. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
