Not illustrated. 1778 Excerpt: .an orator, who abounds in the richest matter and the most elegant choice of words, he certainly has no equal--Like all men of great genius with an exuberant fancy he sometimes stands in need of a curb or check--His friends lament that he often offends his importance by speaking to every question, and that he sometimes weakens the force of his arguments by not knowing when to stop--He is upon the whole a great and most respectable character. Society Society of Charitable Ladies. Ladies you deserve To have a temple built to you. Coriolanus. Col. St T.----I grant him bloody, Luxurious, -avaricious, false, deceitful, Sudden, malicious, flogging of every sin That has a name. Macbeth. Amidst the general current of profligacy and corruption which inclines ready to overflow the nation, and bear down all before it, some instances of national spirit, genuine virtue, and amiable benevolence are to be found, and ought to be pointed out., There is nothing perhaps more highly meritorious in the sight of God and man, than the generous charity of certain great ladies, who have formed themselves into a society, and have undertaken to relieve the distressed of decayed families, and indigent persons of all sects and denominations, in five large parishes of this metropolis. To this end, they have opened a subscription; nothing less than a guinea is accepted--Subscriptions have risen from five to fifty guineas or more.--A committee of ladies meet every week to receive petitions, and persons are employed...
