Excerpt: .waters gleaming From Massac s overflow. From bottoms far before us Oft comes a jar of notes, A vast amphibian chorus That swells from rasping throats; And while I hear the splashing Of watery pools and springs, Among the tree-tops flashing I see emblazoned wings. Each tree that poses dreamlike, Now, breeze-awakened stands; They lean and sway and seem like Engaged in shaking hands; While skies with light clouds pendent High o er the forest-wall, With blue the most resplendent, Are arching over all. I gazed with raptured feeling Long on the sylvan scene, So beauteous and appealing Appeared the country-green. Up rose fair hopes enchanting My senses for the time; I found my young heart panting To breathe a thought in rhyme. With instinct as a leader, Although of tender age, I had searched my little reader For each poetic page; And no...
