NUMBERS XXIII. 23: k ACCOIIDING TO THIS TIME IT SHALL BE SAID OF JACOB AND OF ISRAEL, V WHAT HATH OOD WROUGHT! The narrative, in which this passage occurs, exhibits two wicked men engaged in earnest co-operation, and yet, in some respects, with very different feelings, for the accomplishment of the same evil purpose. The people of Israel, on their march from Egypt to Canaanj became, to some extent, the terror of the nations through which they passed. While they were encamped in the plains of Moab, Balak, the king of that country, became alarmed for the safety of his nation; and forthwith despatched messengers to Balaam, a noted diviner, with a request that he would come without delay, and curse the hostile people that were hovering upon his borders. The message was accompanied by valuable presents, and this, to a man whose ruling passion seems to have been the love of gain, was all that was necessary to secure to the request a prompt and earnest attention. But notwithstanding Balaam was well enough disposed to do all that the king of Moab desired, yet God miraculously interposed his prohibition; and the prophet, corrupt as he was, had too much conscience to venture in the face of it: he therefore reluctantly sent word back to the king, that he could not obtain the divine permission to comply with his request. When this message was communicated to Balak, he instantly renewed the application, accompanying it...
