Let us descend Slowly. At every step much may be lost. The very dust we tread stirs as with life, And not the slightest breath that sends not up Something of human grandeur. We are come, Are now, where once the mightiest spirits met In terrible conflict; this, while Rome was free, The noblest theatre on this side Heaven. --Rogers. In visiting-the Eternal City, its magnificent ruins, noble monuments of art and incomparable temples of religion, there is yet another sight which moves our feelings more, and causes an ecstasy of delight in the heart of the happy beholder. That is the sight of the great and saintly Pope Pius IX, the Vicar of Jesus Christ, and supreme head of the Catholic Church on earth. One look at that noble, grand and venerable pontiff would repay a journey from the extremity of the earth. Pope Pius IX, the most towering figure among the greatest men of the age, tanquarn cedrus inter Libanos, quasi cypressus in monte Sion-- as the cedar tree of Libatius, as the cypress on Mount Sion, pope, confessor and martyr, too, he might well be called, who has sat and ruled in the Chair of Peter longer than any of his predecessors, not excepting St. Peter himself. Of scarcely more than medium size, somewhat full in figure, clothed in a plain but pure white woolen soutane, with a face in which benevolence and majesty seem...
