The natives have no furniture, as they sit upon mats, and eat upon the ground from wooden bowls. Their houses are adorned for the most part with fishing paraphernalia, poi bowls and mats--thin delicately woven mats, sometimes dozens of them, one upon the other, which serve as a bed and covering. It is all very quaint and artistic. From the summit of Punch Bowl, five hundred feet above Honolulu, one has a wonderful view of the city and its surroundings. On one side one sees acres of lovely vegetable gardens, which with their many colored leaves and vines appear, at that distance, like vast flower beds. Looking toward Diamond Head one gets a splendid view of Manoa Valley, one of the most beautiful residence districts in the Islands. Here the rainfall is much more frequent than in other localities and the color-arches that follow these showers have given to the place the name of Rainbow Valley. This ethereal phenomenon is doubtless responsible for the legend of the Princess Ka-hala who once dwelt in the foothills of Manoa and was of such dazzling beauty that her shining loveliness radiated all the colors of the rainbow. The story continues that after a short but eventful career this glorious maiden met her death by a jealous lover who, taking the form of a shark, ate her up. Her mother, the goddess of rain, was inconsolable and her constant tears water the valley to this day. The..
