Not illustrated. 1878 Excerpt: . . . could there have been more than two or three good pailfuls of water in it. One end of it was lower than the other; at the lower end there might have been a couple of inches of water. The supply came in at the upper end, but it was too insignificant to completely cover the bottom of the trough as it moved past the horses mouths to the lower end. Had the supply been three times greater than it was it would probably not have been sufficient for the animals to satisfy their cravings. --Yours respectfully, July 20. H. S. 1 1 OUIDA ON DOGS. In the Gazzetta dllalia of the 26th, 27th, 28th June, are three articles by Ouida, on dogs. The writer says that epileptic disorders, ignorantly called rabies, have enormously increased since the compulsory use of muzzles and chains. All the dogs in the world do not kill in ten years as many persons as in a single year are killed by a lead mine, a lucifer match manufactory, a railroad, or a stagnant sewer. Whilst statistics show that certain manufactures cause the death of all occupied in them before they attain to middle age, it is ridiculous to see a whole people exclaiming against poor animals whose offence, at the highest estimate, is that one of them in a million may bite one person in ten millions. Surgeons well know the efficacy of a panic fear, and that the imagination and a...
