Excerpt from An Exhortation to the Graduates of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia: Delivered on the Day of the Commencement, March the 10th, 1864 Fortunately, there are no indispensable men. Some there are more gifted than others, and whose removal from their sphere of usefulness is greatly felt and deplored. In physical science, an enlarged intellect may greatly extend its boundaries and add rounds to the ladder by which we climb the steep ascent of science; but, when its possessor passes away, the rounds remain, and become a more elevated starting-point for those who follow, and who may thus succeed in soaring still higher. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at This book is a reproduction of an important historical work. Forgotten Books uses state-of-the-art technology to digitally reconstruct the work, preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy.
