ACQUISITION REFORM: ROLE OF TEST AND EVALUATION IN SYSTEM ACQUISITION SHOULD NOT BE WEAKENED: T-NSIAD-94-124 (PAPERBACK)DOWNLOAD

Bibliogov, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .GAO discussed current and proposed legislation affecting the test and evaluation (TE) of defense systems. GAO noted that: (1) it generally supports most of the acquisition reform proposals, but most of the TE reforms should not be enacted because they address perceived rather than actual problems and undermine a key management control over the Department of Defense s (DOD) acquisition process; (2) independent operational TE is the most realistic way to determine if new defense systems meet performance requirements, but systems developers resent the delays and expense imposed by testing; (3) the TE reform proposals support DOD use of low-rate initial production despite possible system deficiencies; (4) the TE reform proposals decrease the priority of TE in defense systems procurements; (5) many of the systems that DOD allowed to go into production before operational TE required costly design changes and retrofits; (6) DOD needs to establish controls over low-rate initial production to prevent premature production; (7) acquisition reform legislation should apply to all systems acquisitions; (8) DOD should limit its commitments to defense systems until developers demonstrate that the systems meet performance requirements; and (9) any changes to current TE legislation would weaken the primary mechanism used to discipline the DOD acquisition process.
