Not illustrated. 1835 Excerpt: .and sinners, just such sinners as you are, are reconciled to God through his death. He has satisfied the awful claims of divine justice, and maintained unspotted all the honours of essential holiness; he has given the law its due, the whole that it can demand in order to the sinners justification; he obeyed its holy precepts in his life, and paid its dreadful penalty in his death, and honoured the law thereby, more than it could have been honoured had a world obeyed its precepts, or ten thousand worlds have been sacrificed on its altar. The obedience and sacrifice of Jesus are impregnated with all the glories of his divine nature; there is infinity about his work and sacrifice; and every act he performed as Mediator, every groan he uttered, every drop of blood that flowed from his sacred veins, cried Peace, peace...
