A young girl in a neat traveling suit of dark blue, alighted from the last car of the long train which had pulled into the Cheltham Bay station and with eager eyes surveyed the crowded platform. Expectin someone to meet you, Miss? the colored porter inquired politely. Why, yes, I was, Madge Sterling returned, a perplexed frown puckering her eyebrows. Just set the suitcase down anywhere here. My friends will surely come in a few minutes. With profuse thanks, the porter pocketed the coin she gave him and swung back into his car. Madge looked anxiously about. On all sides persons were hurrying up to greet friends who had arrived on the train, but no one appeared to be searching for her. Strange Enid didn t meet me or at least send word, she thought. I do hope I ve made no mistake about the time. To make sure, she opened her purse and looked again at the letter which she very nearly knew by heart. She had made no error. Enid Burnett had stated very clearly that she would be on hand when the ten-fifteen train arrived. It will be more convenient to meet you at Cheltham Bay than any other place, she had written in a bold scrawl. From the station we ll go directly to our yacht, The Flora which will be anchored in the harbor. Father will have everything in readiness for the trip, so the instant you set foot on deck, we ll sail. Here s to two glorious weeks on the water! Madge folded the letter and laid it away. There was nothing to do but wait. Undoubtedly, Enid had only been delayed. She watched...
