Ste Publishers, South Africa, 2001. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. What is an intellectual? The term conjures, perhaps, images of armchairs in university studies and shelves packed with dusty tomes; of meticulous research and stringent, challenging argument. The late Jack Simons lived that life - and many more besides. He was a distinguished academic whose writings on South African history and institutions won international recognition. He was a fearless revolutionary: a man who never compromised the rigour of his research and analysis, but who used his findings in the service of the struggle against apartheid. He was a dedicated teacher: in the classroom, in his own home - and in the military camps of Umkhonto weSizwe in Angola. Jack Simons the teacher is the focus of this book. It draws together the affectionate recollections of his students and colleagues, and the manuscripts that survive from his various political education lecture series. It sets these in the context of his life, by means of a biographical sketch and the memories of family members. In material never before published, it frames his teaching in the Angolan camps with extracts from his own diary of the time. Already advanced in years, Simons stoically battled malaria and Spartan food, escaping apartheid air raids by a whisker, as he recorded detailed, acerbic - and sometimes extraordinarily prescient - comments on colleagues, countries and political concepts. This is not the extensive biography Simons life still demands. But it provides a wealth of insights - intellectual and human - into the character of a heroic educator and a truly remarkable man. Comrade Jack sketches the life of the late Jack Simons, an independent-minded Marxist scholar, activist, revolutionary, teacher and hero of the South African struggle. It details his dynamic political lectures in the...
