Government Accountability Office, 2005 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)64199278 Subject: Offshore outsourcing. Excerpt: . . . non-core services can enable companies to focus their resources on their core functions. By outsourcing non-core functions to overseas firms that specialize in them, businesses may also experience improvements in the quality of these functions. Although firms may have many incentives to offshore, they may also face disincentives to offshore. Offshoring has several costs associated with it, including costs to start up an offshore operation and to manage and train an offshore workforce. In addition, some experts have noted that wages of workers in developing countries are rising more rapidly than U. S. wages, 11 therefore shrinking the cost savings of offshoring over time. Furthermore, offshoring carries potential risks, such as possible political instability in overseas locations, less reliable civil infrastructure, exchange rate volatility, less developed legal and regulatory systems, and risks to intellectual property. In the last few decades, the Congress has enacted various pieces of Legislation Enacted in legislation related to trade and increasing global interdependence, Response to Trade-Related primarily due to concerns about their effects on the manufacturing sector. Concerns 12 (See fig. 2.) This legislation sought to expand U. S. exports; establish fair trading practices; assist workers, firms, and communities adversely affected by trade; and improve U. S. competitiveness through support for education and research and development. For example, trade acts of 1962, 1974, and 1979 sought to expand U. S. exports by establishing mechanisms for negotiating and entering into trade agreements. The trade acts also established remedies for industries hurt by import competition through unfair trade practices. The Trade Act of 1974, as amended, established a trade...
