Oxbridge Press, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . There are life-changing dangers on our doorstep. Yet, we don't need to live in fear—we just need to be prepared and ready to roll. This consolidation of Book-2 and 3 in this preparedness series, provides the reader with both a guidebook and reference volume. As a result, it can help you navigate difficult times, plus it contains a wealth of reference information with step-by-step how-to instructions. The author is a popular speaker and talk-show guest, international security consultant, the founder of two firearm self-defense academies, and a former Los Angeles area police detective and SWAT team operator. He has personally faced violent criminals, civil unrest, wide-scale urban riots, civil war, and major disasters ranging from killer earthquakes to deadly volcanic eruptions. And, for several years, he lived with his wife and children in a country engulfed in a bloody guerrilla war. So, he writes from a real-world perspective. The author's knowledge and skills were learned the hard way—at ground zero. As a result, this double-volume book is intensely practical. Today, we need to be ready to roll. Whether it be fleeing from urban civil unrest or finding that we are engulfed in a natural disaster, or, facing a looming terrorist threat or the aftermath of a catastrophic storm, whatever the danger, we need to be prepared and ready to roll. Fortunately, there are common elements of preparation for both natural and man-made disasters. Whether your concern is a weather event such as Hurricane Harvey, wildfires, a downward sliding economy, a cyber attack, or a nuclear, chemical, biologic, or EMP incident; a major incident or minor, or something in between, this book can help you get ready for the uncertain days ahead....
