Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .within the decade I write of, one good and kind friend of these little fellows--a Mrs. Montagu, who died in March, 1800. She was a lady of good family, and an authoress (founder of the Blue CHIMNEY S WEEPS. 217 Stocking Club), who even attempted so high a flight as an Essay on the Writings and Genius of Shakespeare. In her practical benevolence, her heart felt for these little pariahs, and she annually regaled them on May-day, with roast beef and plum pudding. This conduct was so contrary to the general spirit of the age--which could see nothing more in a climbing boy, than a boy being utilized for his own good, and for that of the community, that her conduct was scarcely understood--so much so, that a web of romance had to be woven around her, in order to account for it. It was rumoured, and credibly believed, that she had lost a son, and found him again as a climbing boy ; and, to mark her sense of gratitude for his restoration, she feasted all the boys in London on the sweep s holiday--Mayday. Of course, there is not an atom of foundation for such a story, but practical philanthropy was then so unusual, that a reason had to be found for its observance. After her death the following verses were written: And is all pity for the poor sweeps fled Since Montagu is numbered with the dead? She who did once the...
