Excerpt from An Address, Delivered by Request of the Students of Dartmouth College, at Hanover, N. H., Sept; 5, 1850: On the Occasion of the Death of Gen. Z. Taylor, Late President of the United States The sentiment of Pericles, uttered in commemoration of the virtues of his countrymen who fell during the first year of the Peloponnesian war, finds a warm response in every generous heart. Those men, said he, who have sacrificed their lives for the public good, have every one of them received a praise that will never decay, a sepulchre that will always be most illustrious - not that in which their bones lie mouldering, but that in which their fame is preserved to be, on every occasion, when honor is associated with word or deed, eternally remembered. This whole earth is the sepulchre of illustrious men; nor is it the inscriptions on the columns of their native soil alone that show their merit, but the memorial of them better than all inscriptions in every foreign nation, repositing more durably in universal remembrance than on their tombs....
