University Press of Mississippi, United States, 2010. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Two Hundred Years of Pharmacy in Mississippi by Leslie Caine Campbell Early in the nineteenth century the Choctaw alikchi chito, or big doctor, gathered medicinal herbs for Mississippi practitioner Gideon Lindecum and told him of their traditional usage. Lindecum preserved the plants, accompanied by his carefully made notations. More than a hundred years later Lindecum's compilation was rediscovered by historians and brought to the attention of drug researchers at the University of Mississippi. As a result, some of these plants are being cultivated in the School of Pharmacy's drug gardens. Bridging two cultures and two centuries, university researchers are using advanced spectroscopy and computer technology as they follow the clues of Indian lore in developing compounds for use in modern medicine. This historical link to the present from Mississippi's past is one of the dramatic developments traced in this book. Noted briefly are connections between pharmacy and famous Mississippians, including William Faulkner, Mike Conner, and Theodore G. Bilbo, alongside accounts of the work of the great men of Mississippi pharmacy: Matthew Franklin Ash, Henry Minor Faser, and Charles W. Hartman. This is the story of pharmacy at the grass roots and near the fork of the creek, with glimpses of folk medicine and superstitious practice, the Mississippi pharmacist in the Civil War, and pharmacy practiced in the drugstores of small towns like Bude and Gloster, as well as in Mississippi's principal cities. It traces the evolving professionalism of pharmacy in twentieth century Mississippi and the development of the University of Mississippi School of Pharmacy into one of the nation's leading educational and research centers for the pharmacy profession. The bibliography, containing over 300 entries, provides...
