Mr. Colman presents his compliments to Mrs. Inchbald, and assures her that he never mentioned her name to any person whatever on the subject of The Mogul Tale and was yesterday extremely surprised at his son and Mr. Jewell both suggesting her as the author, which suggestion however he did not in the least confirm, nor was it in the green-room. He really thinks it better for the author not to be avowed at present, though he thinks the piece cannot be injured; and to attempt to injure the reputed author would be infamous. After she had made some alterations, sent to him on the 19th, he took it into the country with him; and no doubt the Mogul benefited by his prescriptions. Soon after the opening of the Haymarket season, it was put in train for performance. As an actress in it, she was present at the reading of her own farce, and, under her mask, highly pleased by its reception in the green-room. This was on June 23rd; yet at the rehearsal, on the 28th, she thought she did not like the alterations: but on the 6th of July all doubts were dispelled by its most brilliant success. Her own record is sufficiently modest: -- I played in The Mogul Tale, my own farce; it went off with the greatest applause. She continues to speak of great applause and full houses the ten times of its representation, in the months of July and August. On...
