This was the little girl that didn't have trouble making friends. This was the little girl that got in trouble for talking too much in class. This is the little girl that wrote poetry to escape her surroundings. This was the little girl that was told she would be just like her mother. This was the little girl that was told to keep house business in the house. This was the little girl that sat on the porch for hours waiting on her father to come. This was the little girl that got in trouble for opening the suitcase under her uncle's bed. This was the little girl that retreated to her closet to get away from the abuser. This was the little girl that believed she could buy love with her body. This was the little girl that wanted to take her life because her mother loved her brother more. This was the little girl that became a woman. This woman met God in her closet space and her life has never been the same! Every little girl wants...
