WITH sensations very different from those with which she quitted Oatham, slie returned to it, and now all her and her friends endeavours were directed to remove the consequences of her afflictions: this was sacilitated by the prospect before her, which presenting to her view all she could rationally wish in the world, . silled her mind with ineffable joy and gratitude, and a few days exhibited her character in a light which, since her sirst leaving Marstonbury, it had rarely been seen in. One week of expectation was elapsed, when Lord Farnford wrote to Mr. Gaynham, requesting to see him at Mount Felix on the day next but one following, when he intended in the sace of the world to marry Miss Lyscot: he hinted a wish that he might afterwards be permitted to visit Constance; but she, sorry to sind him so inclined to start trait aside from his intended course, hook her head, at hearingis, and said it must not be. On the day named, Mr. Gaynham went to Mount Felix, and returning in the evening, gave Lady Harriet and Constance such an account of Lord Farnfbrds conversation, of his behaviour to Charlotte, who waa brought from her sathers ih the morning, and of his exprellions of sorrow for his conduct to Miss Fitzarthur, as removed the very defensible hatred of her, who, for her brothers sake, abhorred him, and drew the sincerest pity, forgiveness, and even esteem,...
