Excerpt from Free and Open Churches: A Sermon Preached at the Parish Church of Stoke-Upon-Trent During the Church Congress, on the 6th October, 1875 And those Common Prayers in which we worship, what a precious heritage are they What a blessing that we are not left at the mercy of one mans feeble utterances, dictated by the narrow limits of his own individuality No our prayers, in their spiritual nobleness, in their exquisite simplicity, are the intensest outpouring of those many wants which the long sufferings of humanity have taught us to appreciate. In our own private prayers we must Often have felt an uneasy consciousness that, after all, it might be better for us if our wishes were not granted but you will find no dangerous or doubtful petition in the many litanies of this precious book. They are not new prayers that we offer, for they are for the most part as Old as the Christian Church. It was in these prayers, and such as these, that the confessor poured out his soul in the dungeon or the catacomb. It was with these. And such as these, that the martyr uplifted his trembling hands out of the ame. And therefore these prayers - the costly legacy of their sorrows and their triumphs - are to us as the perpetual witness against our coldness and our unfaithfulness, against our divisions and our doubts. Oh, let us thank God for the Book of Common Prayer, for this censer of pure gold which has gleamed in so many saintly hands, and from which, amid the storms of twothousand years, have risen, from many a burdened and from many a holy heart, those voices of heartfelt...
