No attempt will therefore be made in the present paper to go into minute detail regarding the use in any field, but the more important typical uses and the properties valuable therein will be described. The occurrence and metallurgy will be discussed first; next. the typical properties in comparison with some of the generally known metals; third, the principal types of uses and the related properties; and fourth, special uses and the related properties. Occurrence and Metallurgy. The ore from which Monel metal is produced occurs in the Sudbury district of Ontario. Lying northwest of the town of Sudbury is the Sudbury Basin of sandstones, slates, tuff, and conglomerates surrounded completely by a fringe of norite rock and then by the older granite formations. This basin is about thirty-six miles in length and sixteen miles wide and the nickel deposits in its vicinity constitute the largest known body of commercial nickel ores. Most of the commercial deposits occur at the contact between the norite basin and the granite surrounding it, and the most important are in the southern half of the rough ellipse described by this contact. The nickel occurs principally in viens of pentlandite cutting the pyrrhotite-chalcopyrite ores. Assistant Manager Technical Department. International Nickel Co., New York....
