Not illustrated. 1909 Excerpt: .with each of the signalmen whose signatures are obtained on the pilotman s copy. To deliver the forms and to get the signalmen s signatures on his own form, the pilotman has, of course, to go from one end of the section to the other. To do this he may ride on a train if in going in that direction it would be travelling over its proper line; but if it would not, then he has to go on foot. A train must not be allowed to run over the single line in the wrong direction until the pilotman holds upon his form the signatures of the signalmen at both ends of the section, and at any intermediate signal boxes. The pilotman wears a red badge around his left arm, bearing the word Pilotman in white letters. This distinguishes him and prevents any one else being mistaken for him. He must be known to the signalmen at both ends of the section, and has to show himself to the signalman at each signal box he passes. It is usual to maintain the block telegraph signalling during pilot-working, the up trains being signalled on the up line block instruments, and the down trains on the down line block instruments. When the second line is again available for use, the pilotman must collect the forms from the signalmen and cancel them. Ordinary working over the two lines is then resumed. On single lines ordinarily worked by staff, tablet,...
